COURT UPHOLDS SENATE ARREST OF STEWART

HABEAS CORPUS WRIT ORDERED DISCHARGED

OIL KING AND DEFIANT TEAPOT
DOME WITNESS EXPECTED

JUSTICE BAILEY DECLARES STEWART'S REASONS REFUSING TO TESTIFY AS "FRIVOLOUS"

By HERBERT LITTLE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Washington, Feb. 23.—(UP)—Senate arrest of Col. Robert W. Stewart, oil king and defiant Teapot Dome witness, was upheld by Justice Jennings Bailey of the District of Columbia supreme court today.

Justice Jennings Bailey discharged a writ of habeas corpus under which the chairman of the Standard Oil Co., of Indiana obtained temporary freedom from the senate officials seeking to arrest him for further questioning and perhaps summary commitment to jail.

Stewart is expected to appeal to higher courts.

Stewart was arrested by senate officials nearly three weeks ago when he refused to tell the senate Teapot Dome committee all he knew concerning the disposition of the Continental Trading Company's mysterious $3,080,000 in Liberty Bond profits.

He obtained his freedom on the temporary writ which was vacated today.

Stewart's lawyers noted an appeal to the district court of appeals. The oil king was released on $5,000 bail.

Justice Bailey dismissed the writ and remanded Stewart to the custody of the senate sergeant-at-arms in less than half a minute. He announced his decision without opinion.

Stewart has sixty days in which to perfect the appeal. Unless it is expedited, the appeal probably will not be argued until next fall.

Justice Bailey filed a short opinion in which he denounced as "frivolous" Stewart's reasons for refusing to testify fully concerning the disposition of the bond.

Stewart attended the short session and received the court's judgment apparently without emotion.

Justice Bailey's opinion pointed out that Stewart swore to tell the senate committee "the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth," but then refused to tell of his knowledge of the bonds. The justice pointed out that, according to Stewart's previous testimony, his testimony on this point would not have affected his private affairs.

Mrs. Gatlin wept when the verdict was returned last night and was extremely happy as she was led from the court room by her husband, Fire Chief Eugene Gatlin of Reidsville, N. C.

The state based its case chiefly on the testimony of the Rev. Thomas F. Pardue that Mrs. Gatlin confessed to him that she killed her father.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 23.—(UP)—The senate interstate commerce subcommittee to investigate the bituminous coal industry arrived in Pittsburgh today and established headquarters.

Soon after their arrival, members of the committee left for a tour of mining camps in the Pittsburgh district. Philip Murray, international vice-president of the United Mine workers of America, was in charge of the inspection tour.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 23.—Thorough investigation of the bituminous coal industry was scheduled to begin today with the establishment here of headquarters by a senate interstate commerce subcommittee.

Four members of the nation's highest legislative body planned to visit personally the soft coal fields, interview operators, miners, and shift charges and counter-charges made by employers and workers on causes for the long drawn out strike.

The subcommittee is composed of Senators Gooding, republican, Idaho; Wagner, democrat, New York; Wheeler, Montana; Pine, republican, Oklahoma; and Metcalf, republican, Rhode Island. All but Metcalf are here. He was forced to remain in Washington because of illness.

When the subcommittee survey is completed, full facts of the investigation will be laid before the entire senate commerce committee and this body will have hearings to permit both miners and operators to present their grievances publicly.

Congress then probably will be drawn into the fight as the committee plans to recommend legislation for settlement of the strike troubles.

The subcommittee planned, after establishing its headquarters, to tour the mining camps. The senators first wanted to look into charges made by Rep. Casey, democrat, Pennsylvania, that wives and children of striking miners are starving.

TROUSERS IN NEW YORK CITY GO UNPRESSED

WORKERS IN SMALL TAILOR
SHOPS, WHOLESALE CLEANING
PLANTS ON STRIKE

TODAY ALL THE PRESSERS HAVE WALKED OUT, LEAVE THEIR JOBS

By PAUL W. WHITE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, Feb. 23.—Most of the trousers worn in New York City and adjacent precincts went unpreserved today.

A few gracious wives consented to do fatiron duty. And there were some men provident enough to have parked their important garments under the mattress last night before retiring.

But the vast majority of pants began to develop wrinkles where they shouldn't and the customary creases became dulled.

Since Monday workers in small tailor shops and wholesale cleaning plants have been on strike and except in the picketed open shops no cleaning and dyeing has been done.

Today the pressers also walked out and the small neighborhood shops where the average New Yorker goes to have his other suit pressed or to wait behind a curtain while his only attire is freshened, were closed.

The men were not the only ones to suffer. If you'd ever seen a plaited skirt that wasn't you can sympathize with the women.

The walkout affected 30,000 workers in 27,000 small shops and 125 wholesale cleaning and dyeing plants.

Joseph D. Cannon, business representative of the Allied Council of Cleaners and Dyers, explained the strike as one of "organization."

The strike has been fairly effective. Manhattan hotels reported they were still able to give valet service as usual but the man in Flat-bush, the Bronx, smaller New Jersey towns and other outlying districts was—hard-pressed.

STATE SPIRITUALISTS CONVENE IN ST. PAUL

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 23.—(UP)—The state Spiritualists Association will convene here Friday for its 30th annual midwinter meeting.

LIZBETH WILEY, MAYOR, IS BOSS OF GREYBULL, WYO.

DOES NOT KNOW IF SHE WILL BE CHIEF EXECUTIVE FOR AN-OTHER TERM

SALARY OF $50 A YEAR NOT A
GREAT ATTRACTION TO
OFFICE, SHE SAYS

Greybull, Wyo., Feb. 23.—(UP)—Mayor Lizbeth Wiley isn't ready to announce yet whether she will boss this thriving little town for another four years.

Being very much of a woman as well as an extremely capable mayor she knows all about curiosity. And—that's the reason she isn't telling anyone her plans.

"There are some people in this town that want to know that too much for me to give them the satisfaction of saying whether I will run for reelection," Miss Wiley explained.

The surprise element, politicians here say, has been one the stepping stones to Mayor Wiley's success. Everyone calls her "Lizzie" because it rolls off the tongue more smoothly but no one knows her well enough to know what she will do next.

Her pay is $50 a year but that doesn't worry Lizzie. She dabbles in real estate a bit and otherwise replenishes the family coffers sufficiently to care for her 83-year-old mother.

"One thing is certain, the salary here couldn't attract anyone to office," she said in discussing elimination of graft from politics.

"The question isn't how to get graft out of politics, but how to keep out of it yourself," she continued.

"Lizzie" admitted some parties had attempted to take advantage of financial reverses she had suffered when she took office, to offer her bribes.

"Officials are needed that have enough backbone to turn something down when they need it," she cautioned.

Born in the sizzling political "Sis Hopkins" country in Indiana, the woman boss of Greybull reserves the right to vote as she pleases for whom-ever she pleases whether he be a democrat or republican.

Although a "progressive republican" she said she would vote just as quickly for a self-made democrat if he was more capable than his republican opponent.

An ardent suffragist, Miss Wiley is disgusted with the failure of women to take a more active part in politics and demand public office.

"Why, of course, a woman could successfully direct the activities of New York, Chicago, St. Louis or any other large city," she continued.

"And they'd probably do a better job than the men are doing. After all, you know, women have just as many brains as the men."

Miss Wiley is too busy "bossing" men to marry one of them, she says. "Haven't time and am not interested."

She is "past 40" years of age and doesn't want to be questioned about how far past she is. She is a mixture of Irish, Dutch, French and Scotch descent and her father's maternal grandmother pledged her service to a family for a period of three years to finance her trip to America from Ireland.

MORE MISSING BONDS FROM SECRET DEALS

TRACED BY SENATE TEAPOT
DOME COMMITTEE IN IN-VESTIGATIONS

CLAIMED THIS BATCH WAS
HANDLED BY HARRY F.
SINCLAIR

Washington, Feb. 23.—(UP)—More missing bonds from the secret deal of oil men in 1921 have been traced by the senate Teapot Dome committee, the United Press learned today.

The committee has learned that these additional bonds were handled privately by Harry F. Sinclair, indicted oil man, but may not have been used for political purposes.

Evidence may be produced at resumption of the hearing today.

The committee already has found that Sinclair gave former Secretary of Interior Fall $233,000 of the bonds after Fall had leased him the Teapot Dome Naval Oil Reserve, a lease which the supreme court has condemned as fraudulent.

It also has learned that $75,000 of the bonds went into possession of Senator T. Coleman Dupont of Delaware and were cashed to pay off part of the deficit of the Republican national committee at the Empire Trust Company, New York.

In this connection four cashiers of New York, Chicago and Boston banks were called to see if any more of the bonds were deposited by the republican national committee.

The four witnesses summoned were William H. Gobbs, Continental Commercial Trust Co., Chicago; John Perette, Chase National Bank, New York; B. O. Blaisdell, First National Bank, Boston; and N. C. Lenfestey, National City Bank, New York.

They were to be questioned, too, concerning private information received by the committee intimating that $10,000 lots of bonds were passed out to state political organizations in various parts of the country.

In connection with the new discovery of bonds used privately by Sinclair, the committee has also called Graham Youngs, of Blair and Co., New York, and Harold W. Kenwell, secretary of the Hyva Corporation, a private Sinclair holding company in which only Sinclair and his immediate family are interested.

SHIPSTEAD RESOLUTION FAVORABLY REPORTED

The jury deliberated only a few hours. Kimbell, a life-long friend of the banker, was shot and killed October 8, 1926, after an argument between the two over Kimbell's wife.

BERNARDSVILLE POLICE RECEIVE STRANGE LETTER

$2,500 SECURITIES ENCLOSED
WRITER EXPRESSES REMORSE
OVER MURDER

ROBBED MISS MARGARET BROWN
OF NEW YORK, SET BODY
AFIRE WITH GASOLINE

Somerville, N. J., Feb. 23.—(UP)—A letter containing $2,500 in bonds believed to have been stolen from Miss Margaret Brown was received by Bernardsville police today. The letter was sent by a man who said he robbed Miss Brown, set her afire with gasoline and left her to die on a road near Morristown on Monday night.

The letter was postmarked Newark. It was received by Police Chief Charles Kavanaugh of Bernardsville. The securities consisted of two $1,000 bonds of the Cities Service Corporation and one $500 gold certificate.

The writer expressed deep remorse and said he had something with him "to end it all" if he were caught.

The letter said:

"I am very remorseful. I have been drinking. I am enclosing to you the money and bonds of Miss Brown, knowing that they will be well taken care of. No one else will get them.

"I left Newark at 4:15 Monday and met Miss Brown in New York at 7:15. I had two bottles of wine in my car and we both drank some. I first met Miss Brown in Buffalo and then again in Newark two years ago.

"We left New York and drove out to Lover's Lane, where there was a large car parked. I drove around until the car left and then we parked there. I tried to take advantage of her but she refused. I hit her on the head and she fell. Thinking that I had killed her, I took gasoline from my car and poured it over her. It lit it and then drove away.

"I drove through Bernardsville and spent the rest of the night in my car. I drove to Newark next morning, where I have been in hiding since. I have a good car and expect to drive God only knows where—to tell, I suppose.

"I have a good start and when I am caught I have something with me to end it all before anything more can happen.

"By the time you get this letter, I will have a good start.

"Au revoir."

New York authorities were notified and detectives were sent to the two banks where Miss Brown had deposits. The list of her securities were checked to see if they corresponded to those included in the letter.

State troopers were informed by telephone from New York that the returned bonds had been positively identified as part of the securities withdrawn by Miss Brown from a Manhattan bank.

That information cleared up any remaining doubt of the authenticity of the confession letter.

Clyde Wolfe, representing a private detective agency, arrived to direct the dragging of the Pasaic river for the remainder of the slata woman's possessions.

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 23.—Albany police believed today the trail of the murderer of Miss Margaret Brown, found burning to death on the highway between Morristown and Bernardsville, N. J., led to this city.

Duncar Bruce, taxi driver, Lynbrook, L. I., told police two men forced him to drive from Lynbrook to Albany at the point of a revolver and then put him out of his machine. In the cab were newspaper clippings of the story of the "human torch" murder.

New York, Feb. 23.—Police were uncovering today a cleverly concealed trail left by the man who murdered Miss Margaret Brown by

GREAT ATTRACTION TO
OFFICE, SHE SAYS

Greybull, Wyo., Feb. 23.—(UP)—Mayor Lizbeth Wiley isn't ready to announce yet whether she will boss this thriving little town for another four years.

Being very much of a woman as well as an extremely capable mayor she knows all about curiosity. And that's the reason she isn't telling anyone her plans.

"There are some people in this town that want to know that too much for me to give them the satisfaction of saying whether I will run for reelection," Miss Wiley explained.

The surprise element, politicians here say, has been one the stepping stones to Mayor Wiley's success. Everyone calls her "Lizzie" because it rolls off the tongue more smoothly but no one knows her well enough to know what she will do next.

Her pay is $50 a year but that doesn't worry Lizzie. She dabbles in real estate a bit and otherwise replenishes the family coffers sufficiently to care for her 83-year-old mother.

"One thing is certain, the salary here couldn't attract anyone to office," she said in discussing elimination of graft from politics.

"The question isn't how to get graft out of politics, but how to keep out of it yourself," she continued.

"Lizzie" admitted some parties had attempted to take advantage of financial reverses she had suffered when she took office, to offer her bribes.

"Officials are needed that have enough backbone to turn something down when they need it," she cautioned.

Born in the sizzling political "Sis Hopkins" country in Indiana, the woman boss of Greybull reserves the right to vote as she pleases for whom ever she pleases whether he be a democrat or republican.

Although a "progressive republican" she said she would vote just as quickly for a self-made democrat if he was more capable than his republican opponent.

An ardent suffraget, Miss Wiley is disgusted with the failure of women to take a more active part in politics and demand public office.

"Why, of course, a woman could successfully direct the activities of New York, Chicago, St. Louis or any other large city," she continued.

"And they'd probably do a better job than the men are doing. After all, you know, women have just as many brains as the men."

Miss Wiley is too busy "bossing" men to marry one of them, she says. "Haven't time and am not interested."

She is "past 40" years of age and doesn't want to be questioned about how far past she is. She is a mixture of Irish, Dutch, French and Scotch descent and her father's maternal grandmother pledged her service to a family for a period of three years to finance her trip to America from Ireland.

MORE MISSING BONDS FROM SECRET DEALS

TRACED BY SENATE TEAPOT
DOME COMMITTEE IN INVESTIGATIONS

CLAIMED THIS BATCH WAS
HANDLED BY HARRY F.
SINCLAIR

Washington, Feb. 23.—(UP)—More missing bonds from the secret deal of oil men in 1921 have been traced by the senate Teapot Dome committee, the United Press learned today.

The committee has learned that these additional bonds were handled privately by Harry F. Sinclair, indicted oil man, but may not have been used for political purposes.

Evidence may be produced at resumption of the hearing today.

The committee already has found that Sinclair gave former Secretary of Interior Fall $233,000 of the bonds after Fall had leased him the Teapot Dome Naval Oil Reserve, a lease which the supreme court has condemned as fraudulent.

It also has learned that $75,000 of the bonds went into possession of Senator T. Coleman Dupont of Delaware and were cashed to pay off part of the deficit of the Republican national committee at the Empire Trust Company, New York.

In this connection four cashiers of New York, Chicago and Boston banks were called to see if any more of the bonds were deposited by the republican national committee.

The four witnesses summoned were William H. Gobbs, Continental Commercial Trust Co., Chicago; John Perette, Chase National Bank, New York; B. O. Blaisdell, First National Bank, Boston; and N. C. Lenfestey, National City Bank, New York.

They were to be questioned, too, concerning private information received by the committee intimating that $10,000 lots of bonds were passed out to state political organizations in various parts of the country.

In connection with the new discovery of bonds used privately by Sinclair, the committee has also called Graham Youngs, of Blair and Co., New York, and Harold W. Kenwell, secretary of the Hyva Corporation, a private Sinclair holding company in which only Sinclair and his immediate family are interested.

SHIPSTEAD RESOLUTION FAVORABLY REPORTED

Washington, Feb. 23.—(UP)—The Shipstead resolution providing for government payment of $142,994 in claims to 985 grain elevator owners was favorably reported by the senate agriculture committee today. The claims represent insurance and interest on wheat stored during 1919 and 1920.

The resolution proposes payment to fulfill contracts authorized by the president guaranteeing a minimum price to producers of wheat.

BANK PRESIDENT IS FOUND GUILTY ON MURDER CHARGE

Dallas, Texas, Feb. 23.—(UP)—John Lawrence, bank president and former mayor of Mesquite, was found guilty here last night of the murder of Jack Kimbell, Mesquite farmer. He was sentenced to serve 50 years in the penitentiary.

The jury deliberated only a few hours. Kimbell, a life-long friend of the banker, was shot and killed October 8, 1926, after an argument between the two over Kimbell's wife.

BERNARDSVILLE POLICE RECEIVE STRANGE LETTER

$2,500 SECURITIES ENCLOSED
WRITER EXPRESSES REMORSE
OVER MURDER

ROBBED MISS MARGARET BROWN
OF NEW YORK, SET BODY
AFIRE WITH GASOLINE

Somerville, N. J., Feb. 23.—(UP)—A letter containing $2,500 in bonds believed to have been stolen from Miss Margaret Brown was received by Bernardsville police today. The letter was sent by a man who said he robbed Miss Brown, set her afire with gasoline and left her to die on a road near Morristown on Monday night.

The letter was postmarked Newark. It was received by Police Chief Charles Kavanaugh of Bernardsville. The securities consisted of two $1,000 bonds of the Cities Service Corporation and one $500 gold certificate.

The writer expressed deep remorse and said he had something with him "to end it all" if he were caught.

The letter said:

"I am very remorseful. I have been drinking. I am enclosing to you the money and bonds of Miss Brown, knowing that they will be well taken care of. No one else will get them.

"I left Newark at 4:15 Monday and met Miss Brown in New York at 7:15. I had two bottles of wine in my car and we both drank some. I first met Miss Brown in Buffalo and then again in Newark two years ago.

"We left New York and drove out to Lover's Lane, where there was a large car parked. I drove around until the car left and then we parked there. I tried to take advantage of her but she refused. I hit her on the head and she fell. Thinking that I had killed her, I took gasoline from my car and poured it over her. It lit and then drove away.

"I drove through Bernardsville and spent the rest of the night in my car. I drove to Newark next morning, where I have been in hiding since. I have a good car and expect to drive God only knows where—to tell, I suppose.

"I have a good start and when I am caught I have something with me to end it all before anything more can happen.

"By the time you get this letter, I will have a good start.

"An avenger."

New York authorities were notified and detectives were sent to the two banks where Miss Brown had deposits. The list of her securities were checked to see if they corresponded to those included in the letter.

State troopers were informed by telephone from New York that the returned bonds had been positively identified as part of the securities withdrawn by Miss Brown from a Manhattan bank.

That information cleared up any remaining doubt of the authenticity of the confession letter.

Clyde Wolfe, representing a private detective agency, arrived to direct the dragging of the Passaic river for the remainder of the slain woman's possessions.

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 23.—Albany police believed today the trail of the murderer of Miss Margaret Brown, found burning to death on the highway between Morristown and Bernardsville, N. J., led to this city.

Duncan Bruce, taxi driver, Lynbrook, L. I., told police two men forced him to drive from Lynbrook to Albany at the point of a revolver and then put him out of his machine. In the cab were newspaper clippings of the story of the "human torch" murder.

Know Your Sweetheart by His Handwriting

Is He Economical?

There are many ways of being economical. True economy should not mean saving scraps of shoe leather, but a desire to accomplish a great deal with the least expenditure of effort. True economists write a small handwriting, but it is not pinched or cramped. The margins and spacings between words will not be large, but they will not be filled to overflowing with stinging little words crammed around the edges, fearful of starting another line. Excessive stinginess crowds words in like this, closes the s's with a tight loop, cuts off the terminals to all words. All these signs combined mean tightness, but not necessarily wise economy.

The true economist does not waste time in foolish scrolls and great loops of enormous size.

Many women and men who have been forced to learn economy will write with lines quite close together, so that they can put many of them on a page, but their words will be further apart than those of the genuinely stingy cramped writer.

It is interesting to see how writers of large and small writing will cramp and squeeze writing in times of pinched finances, and will broaden it out in times of prosperity.

Note—Do not make final judgment until other signs in writing are studied. (Copyright.)

Snow Line on Mountains

Ice and snow are found on high mountains the year around above what is known as the snow line. The snow line is the line showing the limit of perpetual snow, varying with the climate in different parts of the world, but situated at approximately 1,000 feet above sea level, at latitude 70 degrees; 5,100 feet, at 60 degrees; 6,800 feet, at 50 degrees, and from 16,000 to 17,000 feet at the equator.

Cause of Clock's Stopping

When a grandfather clock in a tall Chicago hotel refused to run, the owner was perplexed, for it was in perfect order, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. A clockmaker explained the apparent mystery. The building stands in an isolated spot, where it receives the full force of the winds and sways slightly, especially in the upper stories. When this movement is in the right direction with reference to the swing of the pendulum, the clock stops, the craftsman explained.

BRAINERD 25 YEARS AGO

From the Daily Dispatch

February 23, 1903

John Carlson is on the sick list today and is not able to be at the store. H. W. Linnemann, his partner, is also under the weather but managed to be at the office for a short time this morning.

Will Bean has returned home after several months absence. He was working for the N. P. at Tacoma from June until December, when the company sent him to Buffalo to inspect car wheels being manufactured there. He will probably remain in the city for several days.

There was an important meeting of the Brainerd Teamsters Union Saturday evening, when the matter of charges for hauling trunks for traveling men in the city was considered. The charges were 50 cents for the round trip, and if that man happened to have three trunks it would cost him $1.50. The teamsters Saturday night decided to reduce the price and hereafter the price will be 50 cents for the first trunk and 25 cents for each additional trunk.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Howe returned Sunday morning from Hot Springs, where they spent a month or two.

Mrs. Cora Kelly arrived from St. Paul this afternoon and will be the guest of her brother, J. A. Batchelder and Mrs. G. A. Keene for a short time.

Radio Party

Rev. and Mrs. L. E. Strothman, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Smith and Mrs. E. Haake were entertained at a radio party at the A. G. Shanks home, 421 Fourth avenue N. E., Wednesday evening.

W. C. T. U. Leap Year Party

Plans are being made for a Leap Year party by the W. C. T. U. to be held at the M. E. church Wednesday evening, February 29. This promises to be an interesting event and a good attendance is expected.

deal with the least expenditure of effort. True economists write a small handwriting, but it is not pinched or cramped. The margins and spacings between words will not be large, but they will not be filled to overflowing with stinky little words crammed around the edges, fearful of starting another line. Excessive stinginess crowds words in like this, closes the s's with a tight loop, cuts off the terminals to all words. All these signs combined mean tightness, but not necessarily wise economy.

The true economist does not waste time in foolish scrolls and great loops of enormous size.

Many women and men who have been forced to learn economy will write with lines quite close together, so that they can put many of them on a page, but their words will be further apart than those of the genuinely stingy cramped writer.

It is interesting to see how writers of large and small writing will cramp and squeeze writing in times of pinched finances, and will broaden it out in times of prosperity.

Snow Line on Mountains

Ice and snow are found on high mountains the year around above what is known as the snow line. The snow line is the line showing the limit of perpetual snow, varying with the climate in different parts of the world, but situated at approximately 1,000 feet above sea level, at latitude 70 degrees; 5,100 feet, at 60 degrees; 6,800 feet, at 50 degrees, and from 16,000 to 17,000 feet at the equator.

Cause of Clock's Stopping

When a grandfather clock in a tall Chicago hotel refused to run, the owner was perplexed, for it was in perfect order, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. A clockmaker explained the apparent mystery. The building stands in an isolated spot, where it receives the full force of the winds and sways slightly, especially in the upper stories. When this movement is in the right direction with reference to the swing of the pendulum, the clock stops, the craftsman explained.

MASONIC BANQUET CALLED BEST EVER

Rev. N. P. Olmsted Delivers Fine Talk on "General Washington, The Man"

Masons of Brainerd assisted by members from Pequot, Pine River, Deer Creek, Staples, Wadena, Crosby and Ironton, numbering over 250 paid tribute to General George Washington, notable Mason in afternoon and evening functions yesterday in their rooms in the Iron Exchange building.

The occasion was an outstanding one in the history of the local order, significant by its popularity and voted successful in every possible way.

The banquet served by members of the Eastern Star, the varied program of entertainment, the lodge work in the afternoon, contributed largely to its unprecedented success.

Assistant Attorney General Walter F. Wieland ably filled the position of toastmaster. Walter Mallory, Minneapolis tenor, known throughout the northwest through his rendition of numbers over WCCO, was accorded hearty applause at the conclusion of each of his song numbers. Equally popular were Mrs. Thorson and Miss Gueting, of Minneapolis who presented special vocal and instrumental numbers. George Falconer, master of the Brainerd lodge spoke briefly in his welcoming address. Lou's band furnished good music and the unveiling of an electric flag, the property of the city water and light department by W. D. McKay, secretary of the department during the singing of "America" stood out as a notable event of the evening.

Rev. N. P. Olmsted was the principal speaker of the evening. His topic "General Washington, The Man" was well taken. His speech in part follows:

During that disastrous retreat of the patriot army through New Jersey in December, 1776, when it looked as if the American cause was lost, when the ragged and despoiled army was being decimated daily by desertions, and when some of the most trusted officers were secretly corresponding in disloyal terms, there was one man, of English birth, but at heart a true American, who stood by Washington. That man was Thomas Paine. After marching all day through the December slush and snow he spent his evenings in a draughty tent, by the light of a flickering candle, using a drum head for a table, writing a series of patriotic tracts which served a valuable purpose in strengthening the resolution of the colonists to see the Revolution through to a successful issue. The first one began, "These are the times which try men's souls." That terrible strain proved too much not only for thousands of the rank and file, but a number of the most capable and influential leaders lost faith in the cause. Joseph Gallows, one of the leaders of the First Continental Congress had gone over to the Tories. Gen. Gates, to whom Gen. Cornwallis surrendered at Saratoga was guilty of plotting with a certain Conway for the deposing of General Washington. Gen. Charles Lee, brilliant but erratic soldier of fortune, who, in the minds of many, should have been made commander instead of Washington, was guilty of serious insubordination, and after his death was found to have been a traitor, and, most terrible of all, the brave and brilliant General Benedict Arnold found the disappointments, the criticisms, the restraints too much to bear, and he turned traitor and covered his name with everlasting contempt. Truly these were the times that were trying men's souls! But these were the times that brought into strong relief the true greatness of Washington. As others fell off and as difficulties increased his unswerving determination held him to the apparently hopeless task, through year after weary year until the British were worn out and gave up the struggle.

In his youth Washington had had considerable experience fighting the French and the Indians, and had proved himself a man of great courage and of considerable resourcefulness. But he had never had command of any large number of men, and had retired from military service at 26 to devote himself to his farming. For 17 years he had been out of the army. His mind was completely occupied with the managing of his vast estates, with overhauling his slaves, with land speculations and with the pleasures common to the Virginia aristocracy. For many years he had been a member of the House of Burgesses, but his interest was nominal. He never made a speech during all those years, and his committee service was of slight importance. He was much more interested in fox hunting and horse racing, in cards and dinner parties and the theatre than he was in affairs of state. He was loyal to the king and it was the farthest from his mind that he would ever take up arms against his sovereign.

But when England began to interfere with the liberties the colonists had so long enjoyed he resented it as quickly as the others, and when, after a ship load of tea had been dumped into Boston harbor and in retaliation the port of Boston was blockaded and the commerce of that busy port ruined, his resentment burned hot. But what stirred his ire especially was the Quebec Act by which the Ohio Country was taken from Virginia and Pennsylvania and given to the Province of Quebec, for he had vast land holdings beyond the mountains and he was not inclined to let them be taken away from him. He became very much interested in promoting the boycott of British goods. It was at the Williamsburg Convention in 1774 that he turned orator. His speech was short, but what he said made him, from then on, an outstanding man among the men who were seeking redress from British oppression. This is what he said, "I will raise a thousand men, subsidize them at my own expense, and march at their head to the relief of Boston." This was talk that meant action. He was a member of the First and Second Continental Congresses. He said very little, but at the Second Congress he appeared in his uniform. This symbolic act was eloquent.

Contrary to common opinion, Washington was not the universally accepted candidate for commander of the Colonial forces. There was much difference of opinion as to the proper man to choose. John Hancock was sure he was going to be chosen. Many believed Charles Lee was the best man. Several others were considered. The congress chose Gen. Washington first because he was a Virginian, thus drawing the southern colonies into a conflict that had begun in the north, secondly because he was a man of wealth, and thirdly because of his personal magnetism. For Washington was a heroic figure of a man; well over six feet in height, straight as an arrow, a superb horseman, every inch a gentleman. He was a man of refinement, of poise, of unchallenged honor. He knew all the graces of refined society and could be trusted to handle every delicate situation with tact and diplomacy. His courage was unbounded, and he had the bearing of a man with whom no one would wish to take any liberties. He accepted the command in great humility, declaring that he knew himself unfitted for so great a task, and he gave his services without any remuneration. He never accepted one cent of pay for all his years of service in the army. Not only so, he drew heavily on his private fortune for the patriot cause.

Little did he think when he rode away from Mount Vernon May 10, 1775 to attend the Second Continental Congress that he would not see his home again for eight years, and would at last return after his hair had turned grey and his eyes become dim, a saddened, disillusioned man with the light gone from his eye and the joy from his heart.

No man ever undertook a more difficult task than awaited Washington when he joined the troops before Boston. The men were without uniforms or adequate arms and almost entirely destitute of powder. The troops were entirely undisciplined. The men would not obey their officers, whom they had, in most cases themselves elected, and whom they thought they had a right to discharge if they did not please them. There was a fine democracy among these Yankee troops, which horrified the aristocrat in Washington as well as filled him with despair as a soldier. There was jealousy and unseemly rivalry among the officers, and almost all of them resented having this Virginian brought in to take command over them. Before Washington arrived there had been some pretty creditable action. Lexington and Concord and Bunker Hill had revealed splendid fighting qualities in the colonials. But after he arrived there was no action at all. It was impossible to do any fighting, for there was no powder. He kept sending frantic appeals to congress for powder, but the summer and the autumn and the winter dragged by and no ammunition. Most of the men had enlisted for short terms and when their terms expired they would not re-enlist. Desertions were of constant occurrence. The army was melting away and nothing done. Finally, when powder at last arrived, he took Dorchester Heights and forced the British to evacuate Boston. The only thing that saved the situation was that penned up in Boston the English troops were having an even worse time than the patriot army.

When he removed his little army to New York he knew that he was facing an impossible situation, but it was essential that every effort possible should be made to hold the city of New York and the mouth of the Hudson. The series of defeats on Long Island and in the neighborhood of New York revealed the incompetence of the colonial officers and the cowardice of the green troops. During the retreat from New York Washington was so mortified and denigrated by the cowardly conduct of his men that he hoped he would be killed. But in the evacuation of Long Island he exhibited masterful skill in extricating himself from a perilous situation.

Thanks largely to the indecision of the British commander General Howe the colonial army was not entirely destroyed. When we realize that the revolutionary army was not only greatly outnumbered by the British and Hessian soldiers, but that the great majority of the people of New York were Tories, unfriendly to the Revolution we see something of the difficulty of the situation. It is said that the colony of New York alone sent more soldiers into the British army than all the other colonies together did into the patriot army.

Washington has been criticized as lacking decision. It is true that he always deferred to the Continental Congress in all major questions, and that he constantly consulted his generals and sometimes followed their advice against his own best judgment. If this quality weakened him as a soldier it added to his value as a patriot, for, unlike most great military leaders, he had no personal ambitions. He was always the farmer, called from his estates by his country's need and longing for the opportunity to return to private life. In this regard he has established a precedent in American life that is invaluable.

Washington was distinguished for his magnanimity. When he discovered that Gen. Reed and Gen. Lee were plotting against him he spoke never a word of rebuke, nor permitted the incident to impair his friendship toward these men. An even more serious affair involved Gen. Gates and others. In his generosity toward those who sought his downfall he revealed his true greatness, for his whole concern was for the patriot cause, and he had no time for personal grievances. This same quality followed him through all the abuse and calumny heaped upon him while president.

But it seems to me the greatest quality in Washington was his dogged determination. He hung on while others were giving up. He allowed none of the discouragements that broke other men to crumple. Sometimes he revealed flashes of military genius, particularly in the surprise attack on the Hessian mercenaries at Trenton and upon the army of Cornwallis at Princeton. He was a genius and covering up his weaknesses and making the most of the resources at hand. But it is not his military genius so much as his strength of character that compels our admiration.

He was not a great statesman. He did not have the fertile brain exhibited by such men as Jefferson, Hamilton, Franklin and others, but when called, much against his personal desires, to be the first president of the infant republic, and knowing full well how it would fill his days and nights with bitter and perplexing problems, he lent his splendid poise and balance, and above all, his devotion to the nation's good as against the claims of a party or section that, very tardily, but permanently, his countrymen have given him first place in their affections.

But in the evacuation of Long Island he exhibited masterful skill in extricating himself from a perilous situation.

Thanks largely to the indecision of the British commander General Howe the colonial army was not entirely destroyed. When we realize that the revolutionary army was not only greatly outnumbered by the British and Hessian soldiers, but that the great majority of the people of New York were Tories, unfriendly to the Revolution we see something of the difficulty of the situation. It is said that the colony of New York alone sent more soldiers into the British army than all the other colonies together did into the patriot army.

Washington has been criticized as lacking decision. It is true that he always deferred to the Continental Congress in all major questions, and that he constantly consulted his generals and sometimes followed their advice against his own best judgment. If this quality weakened him as a soldier it added to his value as a patriot, for, unlike most great military leaders, he had no personal ambitions. He was always the farmer, called from his estates by his country's need and longing for the opportunity to return to private life. In this regard he has established a precedent in American life that is invaluable.

Washington was distinguished for his magnanimity. When he discovered that Gen. Reed and Gen. Lee were plotting against him he spoke never a word of rebuke, nor permitted the incident to impair his friendship toward these men. An even more serious affair involved Gen. Gates and others. In his generosity toward those who sought his downfall he revealed his true greatness, for his whole concern was for the patriot cause, and he had no time for personal grievances. This same quality followed him through all the abuse and calumny heaped upon him while president.

But it seems to me the greatest quality in Washington was his dogged determination. He hung on while others were giving up. He allowed none of the discouragements that broke other men to crush him. Sometimes he revealed flashes of military genius, particularly in the surprise attack on the Hessian mercenaries at Trenton and upon the army of Cornwallis at Princeton. He was a genius and covering up his weaknesses and making the most of the resources at hand. But it is not his military genius so much as his strength of character that compels our admiration.

He was not a great statesman. He did not have the fertile brain exhibited by such men as Jefferson, Hamilton, Franklin and others, but when called, much against his personal desires, to be the first president of the infant republic, and knowing full well how it would fill his days and nights with bitter and perplexing problems, he lent his splendid poise and balance, and above all, his devotion to the nation's good as against the claims of and party or section that, very tardily, but permanently, his countrymen have given him first place in their affections.

SAFETY DEVICES FOR SUBMARINES

WHEN the S-4 submarine catastrophe followed so closely on the heels of a sister ship and nothing new had been provided in the shape of safety devices for the men, nor any of the suggestions adopted of an expert who surveyed the first wreck, the average man of the street demanded some action.

No one took sides as to who was to blame for the accident, but every thinking man is of the opinion that something should be done to give an imprisoned crew more of a chance for their lives.

The Dispatch, being some considerable distance from sea water, is anxious to hear both sides in the matter and so gives publicity to this article from the U. S. Navy Magazine, written by its editor, which gives new angles.

The popular sport of congressmen is again in evidence, following close upon the heels of the disaster of the submarine S-4. But let a submarine be rammed, a destroyer grounded, or a seaman "spit over the side" and some congressman needs must seize the opportunity to break into the limelight with a resolution for a congressional investigation and a demand that the Hon. Mr. Wilbur, Secretary of the Navy, hand in his resignation.

Arm chair critics without responsibility find it very easy to operate the Navy Department. They also find it no difficult matter to find fault in the organization and administration of the Navy. While it is true that our Navy is extremely vulnerable to critical attack in all its branches, yet it must be remembered that our Navy is a huge organization with ships and stations spread all over the world. The Secretary of the Navy himself has never seen all of the ships and stations that come under his charge. Doubtless he never has even seen pictures of them. Nevertheless, in the opinion of these armchair critics, if a submarine is accidentally rammed by a merchant steamer or a Coast Guard vessel the Secretary of the Navy is directly responsible and should resign his office. No doubt these fine fellows who are so quick to call on Mr. Wilbur to resign, are ready to assume his burden as Secretary. Also no doubt under their able administration they would arrange matters so that they would be on the bridge of every naval vessel that put to sea, ready, megaphone in hand, to warn off merchant vessels, Coast Guard craft, etc.

Too many laymen believe a submarine to be nothing more than a cigar-shaped steel tank that, when lying upon the bottom of the sea, can be raised simply by hooking a cable to it and hoisting away. The public has become so accustomed to the marvels of human engineering that it cannot quite grasp the fact that there are combinations of circumstances and the elements that defeat the best engineering brains in the world.

Baffled in their attempts to find fault with the work of raising the S-4, the laymen then demand that "something be done to make submarines more safe," and that devices be fashioned that will permit submersibles being raised with speed in the event of their becoming disabled or meeting with disaster. They forget that the submarine is a fighting machine, designed not for ease and safety of its crew but for inflicting the greatest possible amount of damage upon enemy craft. To sacrifice the fighting efficiency of a submarine in order to gain freedom from danger for its crew is to defeat the vessel's first purpose.

If all the sympathetic citizens who are now making such a fuss over the lack of safety devices on submarines would write their congressman to support the bill to provide additional pay for enlisted men of the U. S. Navy assigned to duty on submarine vessels of the Navy, their sympathy for submarine sailors might be of some value. The Secretary of the Navy has submitted the bill for additional pay for submarine men to congress marked "essential." It is now up to congress to prove that their seeming interest in men of the submarine service is not a political smoke screen of blarney but a genuine interest in seeing the men engaged in the dangerous and trying business of operating our submarines well paid.

If the submarines cannot be made safer we can at least make it a little more worthwhile for the men engaged in operating them to undertake submarine duty.

In pleasing contrast to the armchair critics is the action of Representative F. H. LaGuardia. Mr. LaGuardia, like some of his fellow congressmen, wrote a nice little speech criticizing the Navy. Before he had a chance to deliver it he made a personal inspection of the salvaging operations on the S-4. Mr. LaGuardia, then returned to Washington, tore up his speech, and on the floor of the House said:

"I have stood on the floor of this House and I have criticized the Navy very often. I have criticized it because of its aviation policy, and in a good many other instances; but after observing those men on the ship, commencing with Admiral F. H. Brumby and Capt. E. J. King and Capt. Henry Hartley, and Chief Gunner Tiffins and Divers Fred G. Michaels, Thomas Eadie, William J. Carr, and all the men who are on the job, and working night and day, it seems to me that the least we can do is to admit publicly that they are doing everything that is humanly possible, and give them encouragement to continue this work under such trying and difficult conditions.

"Permit me to say that it is much easier to operate a submarine by long distance sitting in a warm, comfortable office than it is from the conning tower of the boat itself. It is easy to criticize and say what should be done not knowing actual conditions. Let us not try to discover from the House Office Building mechanical devices for raising vessels from the bottom of the sea. With all due deference, I do not believe that the solution will come from that source. What we can do and what we should do is to equip the Navy with the best available and last word in submarines. We should also see to it that life on board of these submarines is made as pleasant as conditions will permit. For many years to come there will be danger in submarine navigation. We have accidents on the surface of the water; we have train and automobile collisions, and unfortunate accidents are bound to happen. Naturally it grips the heart to think of men trapped in a compartment of a boat 100 feet under the water in communication with the world and yet unable to be helped. Yet we hear often of men trapped in mines, men working in excavations who are likewise trapped under conditions that make it impossible to be rescued in time to save life."

O. O. MCINTYRE of New York observes that Henry L. Menck-en, so far as his (McIntyre's) opinion is concerned, is not accepted as an authority upon any of the subjects about which he writes, by thinking people. "He has an entertaining style, is amusing, and provokes discussion when you have run out of talking about the weather. But to take him seriously would be silly."

THE WORLD'S GREAT EVENTS

ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE

Napoleon "the Little"

FIRST, Napoleon the Great, and then—more than a quarter century later—a man whom his enemies termed "Napoleon the Little." In other words, Charles Louis Napoleon Bonaparte, nephew and step-grandson of the first Napoleon. A man who inherited all his uncle's ambition, unscrupulousness and charlatanism, with not one per cent of his greatness, his genius, his power of swaying the destinies of the world. Yet this later and lesser emperor served one splendid purpose: He cured France permanently of the "Napoleon idea" that had broken out violently at intervals for more than fifty years.

Louis was the son of the first Napoleon's brother, Louis, king of Holland, and of Hortense, daughter of the Empress Josephine by her first marriage. He was born in 1808. After the fall of the empire, Hortense had fled with her son to Switzerland, where she had received a military education.

In 1836 Louis conspired to win back for himself his uncle's former dominions. For this he was arrested and, without trial, was packed off to the United States. He lived here for a year or so, and is said to have made his home for a time in the New Jersey suburbs. He went later to Europe and in 1840 joined a new conspiracy against the French government.

He crossed from England to Boulogne, and as he stepped ashore a huge eagle (emblem of the Napoleons) swooped down from the skies and perched upon his head. This was regarded as an omen of victory until it was learned that the eagle was a tame one which had been trained to eat daily a piece of meat from his master's hat. The trick failed. Not a single city rose to welcome the young aspirant. Instead, the government condemned him to life imprisonment, and he spent the next six years in jail. In 1846 he escaped and succeeded in reaching England.

But in 1848 France revolted, overthrew its fat "citizen king," Louis Philippe, and declared a republic. The "Napoleon idea" cropped out once more, Louis was allowed to come back, and was elected to the assembly. In December of the same year he was elected president and took a solemn oath to preserve and defend the republic. By way of fulfilling his oath he put his personal adherents in the high offices and so successfully pulled wires that on December 2, 1851, he was able to accomplish the famous "coup d'etat." In other words, he put an end to constitutional government, overawed the Parisians with his troops, dissolved the assembly, had himself made practical dictator, and shot down such malcontents as objected to the new order of things. A year later the empire was re-established, with Louis as emperor under the title of Napoleon III.

Realizing that he had his uncle's great reputation to live up to, the new emperor at once entered on a military career. Russia, in the Crimea, had long menaced Turkey. It was to the interest of the western European powers that Turkey remain intact and that Russia's growing power be checked. So when (because of the invasion of the Danube provinces by a Russian army) Turkey in 1853 declared war, France, England and Sardinia joined forces with her against Russia, and the Crimean war began. Napoleon III was its leading spirit.

Sebastopol, on the Black sea, was Russia's strongest Crimean fortress. The allies landed a large army thirty miles to the north in September, 1854, beat the Russians in a fierce battle on the banks of the Alma and laid siege to the stronghold. At Balaclava and later at Inkerman they won two more decisive victories against a superior Russian force, and at last captured Sebastopol itself, ending the war and, incidentally, enhancing Louis Napoleon's fame.

"Give France a war every four years and the people will be content" was the emperor's maxim, and he proceeded to put it into effect in 1859 by joining King Victor Emmanuel of Sardinia in a victorious campaign against Austria, both sovereigns taking the field in person and dividing the profits. Two years later Napoleon joined with England and Spain in an expedition against Mexico to punish that country for injuries inflicted on French, English and Spanish subjects. Suspecting the French monarch of duplicity, England and Spain withdrew from the alliance, leaving him to play the game alone. His general, Bazaine, conquered Mexico, and Napoleon made Archduke Maximilian of Austria his emperor, backing the latter's authority with French troops. Later he withdrew these troops, and Maximilian was deposed and executed.

All this deepened the distrust Europe was beginning to feel for Napoleon the Little. In 1866 Austria and Prussia went to war with each other. Napoleon demanded a slice of territory from the victorious Prussians as the price of non-interference. This led to ill-feeling that was to culminate in 1870 in the Franco-Prussian war. This latter war left France temporarily crushed and Napoleon the Little without a throne. He fled to England, where (1875) he died in exile, his only son being killed soon after by Zulus.

So ended the Napoleonic dynasty and the life of the man who had crawled into power by the help of a name he was unworthy to bear.

DAIRY FACTS

KEEP COWS CLEAN AND COMFORTABLE

Maintenance so far as possible of summer conditions for dairy cows in winter calls for a good snug barn in which the dairy stock will be comfortable the coldest days. "It is not necessary that the temperature of the barn be kept anything like that of a human dwelling," says Dr. C. H. Eckles, chief of dairying of the University of Minnesota, "but on the other hand a barn so cold that the manure freezes every night will have a bad effect on milk production and will therefore be the means of losing money for the cow owner.

"Ventilation is important. Fresh air for the cow is as great a necessity as feed and is cheap to supply. If a barn is thoroughly wind proof and has a good roof, the cows will not suffer much from cold. In the northern states the barn should be insulated by being boarded up on the inside. If frost gathers on inside walls of a barn in cold weather, causing them to drip moisture as the temperature rises, the ventilation is poor. But ventilation alone in a cold climate will not prevent frosty walls; proper insulation is needed.

"Any changes in the barn that will improve the sanitary conditions, or that will make it easier to keep the cows clean, should be made now. Let it be remembered that the barn is a place to prepare human food and that the health and even lives of the children of the country depend to a goodly extent upon conditions in the stable where milk is produced. To produce clean milk requires clean cows. A good floor, a gutter of proper depth and width, and especially a platform of the right length for the animals, are the first things necessary to keep cows clean in the ordinary barn.

"Imitate summer conditions both as to feed and comfort of the animals, and winter production will be as satisfactory as early summer, with the price generally better."

Salts Fine for Aching Kidneys

When Back Hurts Flush Your Kidneys as You Clean Your Bowels

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, sometimes get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region begin drinking lots of water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is intended to flush clogged kidneys and help stimulate them to activity. It also helps neutralize the acids in the urine so they no longer irritate, thus helping to relieve bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everybody should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean.

A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in trying to correct kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

Sebastopol, on the Black sea, was Russia's strongest Crimean fortress. The allies landed a large army thirty miles to the north in September, 1854, beat the Russians in a fierce battle on the banks of the Alma and laid siege to the stronghold. At Balaklava and later at Inkerman they won two more decisive victories against a superior Russian force, and at last captured Sebastopol itself, ending the war and, incidentally, enhancing Louis Napoleon's fame.

"Give France a war every four years and the people will be content" was the emperor's maxim, and he proceeded to put it into effect in 1859 by joining King Victor Emmanuel of Sardinia in a victorious campaign against Austria, both sovereigns taking the field in person and dividing the profits. Two years later Napoleon joined with England and Spain in an expedition against Mexico to punish that country for injuries inflicted on French, English and Spanish subjects. Suspecting the French monarch of duplicity, England and Spain withdrew from the alliance, leaving him to play the game alone. His general, Bazaine, conquered Mexico, and Napoleon made Archduke Maximilian of Austria its emperor, backing the latter's authority with French troops. Later he withdrew these troops, and Maximilian was deposed and executed.

All this deepened the distrust Europe was beginning to feel for Napoleon the Little. In 1866 Austria and Prussia went to war with each other; Napoleon demanded a slice of territory from the victorious Prussians as the price of non-interference. This led to ill-feeling that was to culminate in 1870 in the Franco-Prussian war. This latter war left France temporarily crushed and Napoleon the Little without a throne. He fled to England, where (1875) he died in exile, his only son being killed soon after by Zulus.

So ended the Napoleonic dynasty and the life of the man who had crawled into power by the help of a name he was unworthy to bear.

DAIRY FACTS

KEEP COWS CLEAN AND COMFORTABLE

Maintenance so far as possible of summer conditions for dairy cows in winter calls for a good snug barn in which the dairy stock will be comfortable the coldest days. "It is not necessary that the temperature of the barn be kept anything like that of a human dwelling," says Dr. C. H. Eckles, chief of dairying of the University of Minnesota, "but on the other hand a barn so cold that the manure freezes every night will have a bad effect on milk production and will therefore be the means of losing money for the cow owner.

"Ventilation is important. Fresh air for the cow is as great a necessity as feed and is cheap to supply. If a barn is thoroughly wind proof and has a good roof, the cows will not suffer much from cold. In the northern states the barn should be insulated by being boarded up on the inside. If frost gathers on inside walls of a barn in cold weather, causing them to drip moisture as the temperature rises, the ventilation is poor. But ventilation alone in a cold climate will not prevent frosty walls; proper insulation is needed.

"Any changes in the barn that will improve the sanitary conditions, or that will make it easier to keep the cows clean, should be made now. Let it be remembered that the barn is a place to prepare human food and that the health and even lives of the children of the country depend to a goodly extent upon conditions in the stable where milk is produced. To produce clean milk requires clean cows. A good floor, a gutter of proper depth and width, and especially a platform of the right length for the animals, are the first things necessary to keep cows clean in the ordinary barn.

"Imitate summer conditions both as to feed and comfort of the animals, and winter production will be as satisfactory as early summer, with the price generally better."

Salts Fine for Aching Kidneys

When Back Hurts Flush Your Kidneys as You Clean Your Bowels

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, sometimes get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.

You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region begin drinking lots of water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is intended to flush clogged kidneys and help stimulate them to activity. It also helps neutralize the acids in the urine so they no longer irritate, thus helping to relieve bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everybody should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean. A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in trying to correct kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

BRAINERD HIGH DEFEATS LITTLE FALLS 26-16 LAST NIGHT

TOURNEY OPENERS HOLD BACK SPEED IN LISTLESS GAME

TWELVE MEN HAVE CHANCE TO

IRONTON ON RANGE FLOOR
FRIDAY

Tournaments are queer things but if last night's game at Little Falls was indicative of the strength of the Sage team, Brainerd high school should weather the test successfully in their opening game of the tournament March 1 when they meet Little Falls.

The game last night could not be considered interesting. It was slow and while Brainerd won handily by the count of 26 to 16, even the locals did not display any particular dash that was outstanding.

Little Falls was crippled slightly by the absence of Konchal, who was ineligible through scholastic standing for last night's game but will be eligible for the tournament. He is considered the heavy gun in the scoring power of the Sage men.

Frequent substitutions were made in the Brainerd line-up as the game progressed somewhat raggedly into the final half. The locals led their opponents by 10 to 2 at the half. There is just the possibility that Little Falls played a stalling game, not wishing to show their colors before the tournament. If that is the case the down river team must have high ambitions for the tournament.

Ten Brainerd men who will be given a chance in the try-out for positions in the tournament team of eight players were given opportunities in the game last night. Two additional men, Arthur Hautala and Dybvik, will be given a chance to make the team.

Brainerd's next and last game before the tournament will be played with Crosby-Ironton on the range floor Friday night. It will be an interesting game to watch as both teams are considered heavy favorites in the coming tournament race.

FRANK LOCKHART AND CAR CATAPULT INTO THE SEA

RACING CAR AT DAYTONA BEACH
A WRECK AND DRIVER IN THE HOSPITAL

WHIRLING ALONG AT OVER 200
MILES AN HOUR, MACHINE
SWERVED CRAZILY

Daytona Beach, Fla., Feb. 23.—(U.P.)—American attempts to wrest the motor car speed title from Great Britain have ended for this year—through the untimely accident that sent Frank Lockhart and his Stutz Blackhawk catapulting into the sea—and chief interest today centered in Captain Malcolm Campbell's attempt to break his own record.

Sunday Captain Campbell sent his big Napier Bluebird over the Ormond Daytona course at a speed of almost 207 miles an hour, to break the record of H. O. D. Seagrave, also an Englishman.

Today the British driver will again test the full power of his Napier in an attempt to attain an average speed of 210 miles an hour.

Lockhart's beautifully constructed little Stutz today was a wreck while the 23-year-old driver was in a hospital recovering from painful injuries, which doctors said would not prove serious.

Whirling along the course yesterday at a speed estimated well in excess of 200 miles an hour, Lockhart's machine suddenly plunged crazily sideways, overturned and finally stopped 100 feet out at sea. Lockhart was pinned in the machine.

Helpers ran to the stricken driver, held him above water and with a crow-bar removed the American driver from the wrecked machine. His hips were crushed and he had other injuries but he was more worried about the condition of his car than he was about his own injuries.

The young driver's wife was in the stand and fainted when she saw her husband's speed machine go zig-zagging into the sea.

Accounts of the accident varied, so swiftly did it occur. Some said the machine turned over five times before it finally came to rest in the breakers. Others said it turned over once.

The first crazy swings of the car sent it directly towards a group of spectators lining the course. Then it switched and plunged out towards the water. Whether Lockhart purposely turned the car from the spectators was not known.

Mechanics said they believed a "froze" differential had caused the accident.

The other American entry, the Triplex, entered by J. M. White of Philadelphia, has been ruled out by the A. A. A. because it has six wheels instead of four. White said he might make a try at an unofficial record today and was confident the machine would develop a speed of 225 miles an hour.

The 150-yard backstroke record was broken by Hubble and Spindle of Michigan with time of 1:45 2-5 seconds, 2-5 seconds lower than the previous mark.

RESUMPTION OF HEAVYWEIGHT ELIMINATION

FOR SOME REASON ATTITUDE OF AVERAGE FIGHT FAN,
"WHAT OF IT?"

BATTLE AFFECTED BY APATHY
FROM SURFEIT OF FIGHTS
STAGED RECENTLY

By FRANK GETTY
(United Press Sports Editor)

New York, Feb. 23.—One week from tonight, Jack Delaney is to meet Tom Heeney in a resumption of the heavyweight elimination tournament, and for some reason the attitude of the average fight fan seems to be—"what of it?"

Tex Rickard returns today from his Florida vacation to see to the allotment of tickets for the show, but as far as all the demands which have been audible are concerned, the promoter might as well have spent another week at Miami Beach.

Last year—in this very same week—a similar appearance by Delaney packed Madison Square Garden with a $200,000 house and started a tremendous ticket scandal because of the anxiety of the customers to be present.

Of course, Delaney let the boys down badly that night, losing to Jimmy Maloney of Boston, but fight fans never have been noted for long memories, and there must be some other reason for the apparent apathy of the paying public.

The Delaney-Heeney bout cannot exactly be called a "natural" which is what promoters call those matches which just naturally fill the house, but the affair looks like the most promising of the season as far as heavyweights are concerned.

It may be that Tex Rickard's reappearance will be the occasion of the sounding of loud bassoon, the raucous thunder of the ballyhoo. It may be that the promoter will have a few things to say to his subordinates who have failed so lamentably to start the tomtoms and the trumpets.

One explanation of the lack of interest in the fight is the unusually high run of bouts among the smaller fellows at Madison Square Garden.

The Canzoneri-Bass affair was a rattling good bout, and the Hudkins-Baker affair which followed was so desperately waged that old Joe Humphries, the veteran announcer, begged.

"Don't make me look at any more fights like that. They're too brutal."

And tomorrow night, there is the McLarnin-Terris match, which has all the earmarks of a "natural." Sid Terris continues an 8 to 5 favorite. Why, no one can say, except that there is more money out for him than McLarnin. The situation has all the earmarks of one of these occasions on which the "wise money" will flood the market at the last moment.

Lack of interest in the Delaney-Heeney fight may be due to disappointing fights waged within the past year by both contenders. Delaney was beaten by Johnny Risko, while Heeney had all he could do to get past the Cleveland baker boy. Heeney was beaten by Paolino, and Delaney was taking a licking from the Basque when suddenly declared winner on a mysterious foul.

Yet one of this pair, either the dark-eyed Canadian woodsman with the terrific wallop or the rugged, freckled New Zealander with the heart of oak and a chin of iron, is most likely to be Gene Tunney's next opponent in a battle for the heavyweight championship of the world.

Can it be that there is apathy with respect to that battle, as well?

has all the ear-marks of one of these occasions on which the "wise money" will flood the market at the last moment.

Lack of interest in the Delaney-Heenev fight may be due to disappointing fights waged within the past year by both contenders. Delaney was beaten by Johnny Risko, while Heenev had all he could do to get past the Cleveland baker boy. Heenev was beaten by Paolino, and Delaney was taking a licking from the Basque when suddenly declared winner on a mysterious foul.

Yet one of this pair, either the dark-eyed Canadian woodsman with the terrific wallop or the rugged, freckled New Zealander with the heart of oak and a chin of iron, is most likely to be Gene Tunney's next opponent in a battle for the heavyweight championship of the world.

Can it be that there is apathy with respect to that battle, as well?

Contentment by the pipe-load

EVERY load of P.A. in your pipe is a load of sunshine in your smoke-system. Why do you suppose more Prince Albert is smoked than any other brand? I'll tell you. When you open a tidy red tin and set free that P.A. aroma, you're on your way.

When you taste that first, wonderful pull on your pipe, you've arrived. Cool as the keel of a river-boat. Refreshing as a breeze on the top deck. Mellow and mild and long-burning, with a body that puts satisfaction right over the plate every time.

Take the nearest path to pipe-joy. Go get yourself a tidy red tin of good old P.A. That's all there is to this business of finding the right combination to contentment. You'll say so after that first fragrant pipe-load of this delightful tobacco.

burning her in gasoline near Morristown, N. J.
The motive apparently was to rob her of $9,000 she was persuaded to draw from a bank, perhaps after the slayer had made love to her and convinced her they were to make a honeymoon trip.

Despite the confusing circumstances arranged by the murderer to cover his escape, police believed they were on his track and had a fairly accurate story of the actual crime.
Miss Brown, a comely woman of 40 employed as a tutor by James Park Gillespie, well-to-do New Yorker, was found by motorists on Monday night, still alive but being cremated in blazing gasoline.

The weird crime was committed back of a hot dog stand near Morristown. The only clue available there was that a dark blue automobile had been seen parked near the spot, deserted at this time of the year.

The search centered in New York. From servants of the Gillespies, detectives learned that Miss Brown had been friendly with a man. They had heard him addressed as 'Doctor.' He was cautious in his friendship with her and never entered the Gillespie home.

On Monday, Miss Brown quit her job. She told Mrs. Gillespie she was going to California to visit relatives. Her trunks were checked to California.

At noon she met her niece, Miss Mary Brown, of Fort Lee. She said nothing about leaving the Gillespies, but explained she was going with them on a trip to Florida.

If she had been acting on the instructions of the man who was deceiving her, she could hardly have devised a better plan to lull suspicion and prevent inquiries about her absence.

The slayer obviously intended to cremate the body and its clothing, so that the victim never could be identified. The description of the clothes published next day led the Gillespies to make inquiries and she was identified yesterday by Miss Mary Brown and her father, Ferdinand Brown, brother of the murdered woman.

New Jersey and New York detectives who had combined in the search believed they had definite leads to the identity of the man. He was thought to have occupied rooms in a section of the city near the Gillespie home with a woman. Through her they expected to trace him.

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

The Sepoy Mutiny

A FEW pots of grease cost many thousand lives and nearly $200,000,000 in India, about half a century ago, besides inaugurating one of the bloodiest tragedies ever enacted.

India's history, down to the Seventeenth century, is largely a chronicle of barbarism, internecine wars, invasions and Oriental intrigue, with a growing European influence in the most accessible districts. The vast country was teeming with wealth of a sort that attracted Europe's covetous eye. The Portuguese won a commercial foothold there, only to be driven from power by the Dutch, who in time were crowded out by English and French. Last of all, the French were routed by the English, until, by 1700, England practically ruled India. Clive, Warren Hastings, Lord Cornwallis and other governors brought the whole territory either directly or indirectly under British sway.

The natives were untrustworthy. The Indian potentates whose power was checked and a horde of fanatics whose religious rites had been curtailed by the foreign rule were ever stirring up revolt against their new masters. Hence it was necessary to maintain a large army in India. England could not spare a sufficient force of white men for the purpose, so organized native regiments, under British officers, and trained them along European lines. These native troops were called Sepoys (from the Persian word "sipahi," signifying "soldier"), and proved splendidly efficient in repeated campaigns. Thus, by 1856, all India seemed safe and moderately content under British domination. True, there were countless fanatics and unscrupulous native rulers who waited only the opportunity to rebel; but for a long time they lacked the chance. That same "chance" came about in an unforeseen fashion. Like most misfortunes of this sort, it was brought about and then augmented by blunders on the part of the British government.

Several English regiments had been withdrawn from northern and central India to serve in the Crimean war. Others were away in Burmah. These departures left barely eighteen white regiments available for action. Several of the most important arsenals and garrisons were in charge of the Sepoys. At about this time the Enfield rifle was adopted for use among the Sepoys. In loading the rifle it was necessary to bite off the end of the cartridges. These cartridges were coated with grease. They were also packed in glazed paper. The foregoing facts seem mere trifles, yet they brought on a bloody insurrection. The Sepoy regiments were made up of Mahometans and Buddhists. As the English very well knew, the Buddhists and Mahometans alike are forbidden by the most sacred laws of their religion from eating or even handling pork. At once it was claimed by native rulers, agitators and fanatics that the fat of swine was used in greasing the cartridges and glazing the paper. To this was added the rumor that the government was seeking to force the native troops to embrace Christianity, by making them violate their own creed. At once fanaticism blazed into furious revolt. A devout Christian could not be more indignant at being commanded to stamp on the crucifix than were these Moslem and Hindu devotees at the order to defile their souls by handling and tasting pork-fat. Several Sepoy regiments refused to receive the cartridges, and even rebelled. They were disbanded, and the government tardily "called in" the hated articles of ammunition.

On May 2, 1857, a cavalry regiment was ordered, by error, to bite the greased cartridges, in loading their guns. They refused and were forcibly disarmed. This was the signal for general revolt. At Meerut, a few miles northeast of Delhi, the Sepoys and townsfolk rose together, massacred the British garrison and white residents and marched to Delhi. They captured the latter city and made it the headquarters of the mutiny. The whole Bengal presidency revolted and Europeans were massacred wholesale amid the most unspeakable outrages. Nana Sahib, maharajah of Bithur, loudly proclaimed his loyalty to the government, but at the first opportunity went over to the mutineers. He besieged Cawnpore. On his solemn promise of safe-conduct the garrison at last surrendered. As soon as they were at his mercy he murdered them, massacring 210 English women and children who had sought refuge in the town. Lucknow and other cities garrisoned by the English were besieged, and throughout northern and central India British rule was nearly extinct.

The government at last awoke to the peril. Armies under Havelock, Outram, Campbell and other generals were sent to stamp out the mutiny. Lucknow was relieved when at the last gasp, and within a year the final sparks of insurrection were quenched. Then the British wreaked fearful vengeance on their beaten foes.

The mutiny brought about a radical change in England's mode of ruling her East Indian possessions. In 1876 Benjamin Disraeli, premier of Great Britain, framed the "Royal Titles Act," making Queen Victoria empress of India, and, incidentally, securing for himself the title of earl of Beaconsfield by way of reward.

Simple Goodness

More and more clearly we learn that it is not great talent or great wealth that counts most for one's usefulness in the world, but simple goodness. The life that is upright, the companionship that is kind, honesty and honor that never fail, the word that can be trusted, these are all around us, and they make up the comfort of human association.

Horses' Origin Unknown

Dubone Heyward says "marsh tacks" are the "poor horse trash" of the Carolina coast country's swamps and sea islands. "Early tradition says these horses were found by the English when they first came and that they are the descendants of runaways from the Spanish settlements to the south about St. Augustine, or horses turned loose by De Soto upon his ill-fated march to the Mississippi."

CONSTIPATION IS SOURCE OF DANGER

Science Says 90% Suffer From Intestinal Poisoning

The chances are nine to one you are suffering some of the ill effects of constipation—medical science says 90% of modern city people are effected. You may not know the cause—your bowel movements may actually be regular. But in many cases they are incomplete, and decayed material remains in the intestine to poison the entire system.

Headaches, lassitude, backache, sleeplessness, bad dreams, nervousness, loss of appetite, lowered vitality and increased susceptibility to serious diseases which may result in premature disability or death—this is the price of intestinal poisoning. Don't trifle with it!

Soft life and soft diet are the causes. Add bulk and roughage to your diet. Don't form the dangerous laxative habit—roughage is the natural cure. It protected primitive man and it will protect you. Natural 100% bran—Pillsbury's Health Bran—is best.

Warning—be sure you get the right bran. When your doctor says, "Eat bran," he means a true 100% bran—Pillsbury's Health Bran. Because it is unsweetened, uncooked and unadulterated, it really does the work—you get the full, gentle, natural laxative action of the unbroken flakes. Use it to prepare delicious foods—muffins, tea cakes, apple cake, macaroons, doughnuts, etc.—recipes are on every package. Eat it some way three times a day.

Suspenders Were Once Indecent

This week we wish to invite every Man and Boy in this County to drop in and look over our advance showing of Hats and Caps. It is their week, and we have taken pains to see that our stocks of belts, suspenders, garters and shirts are strictly up to date.

While feminine fashions have a bit the best of it today, we find, as we delve into history, that styles in men's wear have an interesting background of romance and tradition.

Consider the suspender in its drab usefulness, and then consider the immoral influences ascribed to it back in 1760 when a sober-faced delegation of Pennsylvania Quakers called on the Rev. Talbot to remonstrate with him for keeping his breeches in place with tape crossed over his shoulders, instead of by the drawstring prescribed by public decency and morals.

This of course is past history, and the problem of "we moderns" is not only to have a clear view of present styles, but to be able to peer just a bit into the future.

Several Sepoy regiments refused to receive the cartridges, and even rebelled. They were disbanded, and the government tardily "called in" the hated articles of ammunition.

On May 2, 1857, a cavalry regiment was ordered, by error, to bite the greased cartridges, in loading their guns. They refused and were forcibly disbanded. This was the signal for general revolt. At Meerut, a few miles northeast of Delhi, the Sepoys and townsfolk rose together, massacred the British garrison and white residents and marched to Delhi. They captured the latter city and made it the headquarters of the mutiny. The whole Bengal presidency revolted and Europeans were massacred wholesale and the most unspeakable outrages. Nana Sahib, maharajah of Bithur, loudly proclaimed his loyalty to the government, but at the first opportunity went over to the mutineers. He besieged Cawnpore. On his solemn promise of safe-conduct the garrison at last surrendered. As soon as they were at his mercy he murdered them, massacring 210 English women and children who had sought refuge in the town. Lucknow and other cities garrisoned by the English were besieged, and throughout northern and central India British rule was nearly extinct.

The government at last awoke to the peril. Armies under Havelock, Outram, Campbell and other generals were sent to stamp out the mutiny. Lucknow was relieved when at the last gasp, and within a year the final sparks of insurrection were quenched. Then the British wreaked fearful vengeance on their beaten foes.

The mutiny brought about a radical change in England's mode of ruling her East Indian possessions. In 1876 Benjamin Disraeli, premier of Great Britain, framed the "Royal Titles Act," making Queen Victoria empress of India, and, incidentally, securing for himself the title of earl of Beaconsfield by way of reward.

Jefferson Made Change

The first written Presidential message was read to congress December 8, 1801. It was sent by President Jefferson to the Seventh congress. Prior to this the President had appeared before congress.

Simple Goodness

More and more clearly we learn that it is not great talent or great wealth that counts most for one's usefulness in the world, but simple goodness. The life that is upright, the companionship that is kind, honesty and honor that never fail, the word that can be trusted, these are all around us, and they make up the comfort of human association.

Another Proof

Most of us are optimists. We all yearn to build homes with big fireplaces, with the idea that the family will gather round them evenings.—Los Angeles Times.

SOUTH OAK LAWN

Unreliable help in the kitchen is apt to cause annoyance at critical moments, but don't be discouraged. When your cook has failed you and life looks like a piece of gray flannel, just discharge the cook.

The children of school district No. 15 enjoyed a holiday Wednesday, being George Washington's birthday.

Miss H. Hendrickson who is teaching school in district 15 spent the holiday on Wednesday at home with her parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Olson, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Thienes motored to Little Falls Sunday.

Among the shoppers in Brainerd last Saturday were Melvin Petersen, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Thienes, Mrs. LeDoux, Mr. Lamont and C. E. Sutton.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Senn and children visited at C. E. Sutton home Saturday evening.

Doris Olson returned to high school Monday morning.

Leo and Fred LeDoux have been busy hauling shop wood lately.

In spite of the cold weather Monday, the attendance was fairly good at school.

L. Wohlfather visited at the Senn home Friday.

There are two kinds of people in this world, some who like to have their name in the paper and some who don't. Which are you?

Jack Hendrickson sawed wood for Pete Mustonen Monday.

Maude Morecomb who is attending high school spent the week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Morecomb.

Sunday school is held at Presbyterian church every Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. All are cordially invited.

Useless Things

Four useless things in the world are professional weight lifting, shoplifting, face lifting and uplifting.

Horses' Origin Unknown

Dubose Heyward says "marsh tacks" are the "poor horse trash" of the Carolina coast country's swamps and sea islands. "Early tradition says these horses were found by the English when they first came and that they are the descendants of runaways from the Spanish settlements to the south about St. Augustine, or horses turned loose by De Soto upon his ill-fated march to the Mississippi."

CONSTIPATION IS SOURCE OF DANGER

Science Says 90% Suffer From Intestinal Poisoning

The chances are nine to one you are suffering some of the ill effects of constipation—medical science says 90% of modern city people are effected. You may not know the cause—your bowel movements may actually be regular. But in many cases they are incomplete, and decayed material remains in the intestine to poison the entire system.

Headaches, lassitude, backache, sleeplessness, bad dreams, nervousness, loss of appetite, lowered vitality and increased susceptibility to serious diseases which may result in premature disability or death—this is the price of intestinal poisoning. Don't trifle with it!

Soft life and soft diet are the causes. Add bulk and roughage to your diet. Don't form the dangerous laxative habit—roughage is the natural cure. It protects primitive man and it will protect you. Natural 100% bran—Pillsbury's Health Bran—is best.

Warning—be sure you get the right bran. When your doctor says, "Eat bran," he means a true 100% bran—Pillsbury's Health Bran. Because it is unsweetened, uncooked and unadulterated, it really does the work—you get the full, gentle, natural laxative action of the unbroken flakes. Use it to prepare delicious foods—muffins, tea cakes, apple cake, macaroons, doughnuts, etc.—recipes are on every package. Eat it some way three times a day.

Suspenders Were Once Indecent

This week we wish to invite every Man and Boy in this County to drop in and look over our advance showing of Hats and Caps. It is their week, and we have taken pains to see that our stocks of belts, suspenders, garters and shirts are strictly up to date.

While feminine fashions have a bit the best of it today, we find, as we delve into history, that styles in men's wear have an interesting background of romance and tradition.

Consider the suspender in its drab usefulness, and then consider the immortal influences ascribed to it back in 1760 when a sober-faced delegation of Pennsylvania Quakers called on the Rev. Talbot to remonstrate with him for keeping his breeches in place with tape crossed over his shoulders, instead of by the drawstring prescribed by public decency and morals.

This of course is past history, and the problem of "we moderns" is not only to have a clear view of present styles, but to be able to peer just a bit into the future.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

One finds ardor and enthusiasm in t bars which are crossed high, and more often to the right than the left. They are long bars—not clipped short. If a girl is so lucky as to receive a letter with high crossed t bars, connected with the word following as a beginning stroke, she may know she has an enthusiastic sweetheart, as well as one with good constructive and planning ability.

Terminals which curve upward as though fencing out for better things betray ardor, as well as large loops to letters like h, b, etc.

Dolores Costello in "OLD SAN FRANCISCO" is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Buckwell, San Francisco boss, with lawyer, Brandon, attempts to get possession of old Vasquez ranch occupied by Vasquez and his beautiful granddaughter Dolores. Their plot is disclosed by Terry, Brandon's nephew, who loves Dolores. Terry and Dolores have misadventure. Dolores falls into Buckwell's power, but is saved by Terry. Buckwell uses force to oust Vasquez, but is defeated. He then tries to guile, but old Vasquez hears Terry's warning and confronts Buckwell. The effort is too much and old Vasquez dies from shock caused by Buckwell's veiled threats.

Biting her lips to keep down the sobbing and blinking fast to keep back scalding tears, Dolores removed the lace shawl from her shoulders and placed it gently beneath her grandfather's head.

Howed in grief, she lingered to offer a prayer for his soul and noticed that the Vasquez sword was lying beside his still white hand. Without hesitancy she picked it up. Through tear blinded eyes the family crest and famous inscription appeared dim and far away, but this superficial blur did not cloud their meaning. Dolores knew that she was the last of the Vasquez line, and her desire for revenge could not have been stronger had she been a man in the prime of life. For the time being grief and sadness were put aside and in their place was born a terrible fury, a fury devoid of fear, perhaps an inheritance from her courageous pioneer ancestors.

"You came to taunt a noble gentleman," she said accusingly, the sword held fondly in her arms. "His soul is now with God, who is also a God of vengeance."

Slowly she rose from her prayerful attitude beside the lifeless form of her only relative. She was an appealing and pitiful little figure, so alone and brave in her sadness that it is difficult to understand why even Chris Buckwell's heart was not softened.

Dolores followed slowly, still holding the sword of vengeance before her.

His nature lacked the "something" that goes to make up the finer things of life, and when Dolores paused a slight smile of amusement suffused his face. Her pride and courage impressed him merely as an elaborate exhibition of heros. Grief for the death of a grandfather was beyond his ken.

Angered by Buckwell's maddening indifference, Dolores glared at him with hatred blazing from her eyes. She scrutinized so long and intently that Buckwell was secretly conscious of a slight surprise at her grim wrath.

Hovering in the background the peon had been an awed witness to his master's death, and ever mindful of observing all customs in connection with the ranch, he hastened within the chapel to toll the bells that indicated the passing of a Vasquez's soul, and as he went he crossed himself devoutly.

When the first sound of the old mission bells broke the twilight stillness Buckwell's smile faded. He shivered perceptibly, uncomfortable from the ghostlike sound.

Dolores had not taken her accusing eyes from his face. "A Vasquez avenges a Vasquez," she said in a penetrating whisper.

Buckwell turned quickly.

With sword upraised, as though it were a cross, she stood motionless. Twilight shadows played about her head and formed a flickering halo—as if she were sanctified to be the avenger of her blood.

A trifle awed and miserably annoyed by the mournful ringing of the bell, Buckwell backed away. Dolores followed slowly, still holding the sword of vengeance before her and still silent and grim as if moved by some phantom spirit.

Buckwell could not shake off the fear that was clutching his heart. Anything connected with religion or the supernatural touched his greatest weakness. The life of deception he had lead and the sins he had committed against his own race made him fear the vengeance of his own Gods as well as the possible ill will of the Christian deity.

Bucking into a niche in the Chapel wall, Buckwell came to a stop and instinctively extended his arm in protection. His hand came in contact with something unusual to the touch and turning around he recoiled at the sight before him. It was a statue of the Virgin Mary! More awed than ever he turned away and resting his arm on an outside sill removed his hat to wipe his moist brow. As he did so he glanced to glance through the open window and his eyes rested upon a large crucifix. He stared as if hypnotized. The last light of evening filtered through the windows and gave the image a strangely lifelike appearance. Hastily turning away, he found Dolores still confronting him. So intense was her yearning to know what was right to do that she appeared to be in a trance, asking her ancestors to aid her in the grave. The image in the niche, the crucifix, the chapel bells, the graveyard and the lovely figure of Dolores with upraised sword who resembled an avenging angel.

The peon did not cease ringing the mournful deathknell and without warning he pulled harder on the bell rope and the clamor was deafening to Buckwell, who stood below as though petrified by the sound.

"Stop those accursed Christian bells!" he shouted, covering his ears to shut out the clamor. It was perhaps the touch of the childish oriental superstition in Buckwell that made him fear an unknown punishment from the Gods he had ignored while pretending to be an irreproachable Christian.

"No, they are ringing for Grandfather," said Dolores distinctly. "He would want them to ring. It is a message to God that his soul is coming." Her chin quivered and tears flooded her eyes.

The bells seemed to chime louder and louder and Buckwell's expression became more and more terrified. As his terror grew the mark of western veneer, that he had so painstakingly trained his features to assume, vanished. The heathen soul of the Mongol was revealed! It was the first time outside of his own quarters that Chris Buckwell had been thrown off guard. His features sagged, his eyes became squinting slits and even his long carefully trained moustache drooped. His was unmistakably the face of a Chinaman peering at Dolores as though he were compelled to confront all the evils of his own belief and conscience. It was a horrified countenance, livid and stricken.

If Dolores had suddenly been given a glimpse into another world peopled by strange beings she could not have been more startled and amazed than at that momentary flash of Chris Buckwell, the Chinaman.

"Oh! You hideous thing!" she breathed in repulsion. A terrible revulsion of feeling took possession of her. The man she and her Grandfather had trusted and honored with their hospitality was nothing more than an Oriental! He had held her in his arms—touched her with his lips! It was all too hideous to think about, and without warning Dolores—the last of the famous old family—bore down upon him, with the great sword, determined to avenge the insult.

A new horror seized Buckwell when he realized that he had dropped his mask and revealed his real self to Dolores. Aroused to action by her menacing approach, coupled with the realization that his secret had been discovered, he turned and ran from the mission like a man fleeing from a wild beast. The mournful deathknell followed him down the hill and far along the road on his way back to town.

With intense vehemence Buckwell cursed the weakness that had caused the disastrous revelation. He knew that Dolores had penetrated his disguise and again he emitted a volley of oaths.

"Women always squeal, too!" he mused. "Hell, I might better be dead than have her tell what she knows—an investigation would make a bad matter worse. There is only one thing to do—get rid of her—it can be done easily!"

Chris Buckwell resumed his old smirk of confidence while his scheming brain began devising plans for Dolores' abduction. (To be continued.)

The durability of hardwood is excellently illustrated by a redwood log which has recently been cut up into lumber in California. American Olive Growing
The region in which the olive may be successfully grown for the commercial production of fruit in the United States is not as great as for most frost-hardy fruits, and has been confined to portions of California and Arizona, although the trees will live and bear some fruit in portions of all of the southern tier of states of this country.

Objects of Girl Scouts
The Girl Scouts, a national association, is non-sectarian and non-partisan. The object of the organization is to give girls, through natural, wholesome pleasures, those habits of mind and body which will make them useful, responsible women, ready and willing to take a definite part in the home, civic and national affairs of their country.
